HISTORIC AMERICAN BUILDINGS SURVEY

book. Cupboard in room (1) was in room (2) and is very fine corner type and typically dutch building type with very wide bevels. This evidently formed part of paneled end, as other derelict paneling from this room is now filling in the kitchen (4) fireplace. Ceilings heavily timbered as indicated. Stair has sheathed spandrel below, with sheathing carried up to form balustrade, with cap applied over end of boards. The attic is enormous and retains original framing. (NOW MUSEUM)
